

Agent Orange-Induced Primary Cutaneous Anaplastic Large Cell Lymphoma (PC-ALCL) of the Hand

Morgan Lorio¹, Brandon Lewis², John Hoy³, and Matthew Yeager³

¹Advanced Orthopedics

²East Tennessee State University

³University of Florida

May 21, 2020

Abstract

Primary cutaneous anaplastic large cell lymphoma (PC-ALCL) is a CD30+ lymphoproliferative disorder of the skin. There are currently no case reports involving the presentation of Agent Orange-induced PC-ALCL of the hand, surgical excision, and follow-up treatment. We present a case of Agent Orange-induced PC-ALCL and the subsequent surgical management.

Hosted file

Case Report - Holcombe Final 2.0.pdf available at <https://authorea.com/users/324855/articles/452926-agent-orange-induced-primary-cutaneous-anaplastic-large-cell-lymphoma-pc-alcl-of-the-hand>

