

Injury protection strategies for H63D syndrome patients suffering from cataplexy

Dr. Carolina Diamandis¹, David Seideman¹, Jacob S Adams¹, Riku Honda¹, and Lucas Smith¹

¹Affiliation not available

May 26, 2021

Abstract

Patients suffering from H63D syndrome have a significant incidence of narcolepsy with cataplexy as a symptom. Previous studies have shown that the presence of narcolepsy with cataplexy in the context of H63D syndrome is a surrogate marker for structural brain damage. Now, the aim was to clarify which measures best protect affected patients with cataplexy from injury.

Hosted file

H63D cataplexy protection.pdf available at <https://authorea.com/users/410930/articles/523652-injury-protection-strategies-for-h63d-syndrome-patients-suffering-from-cataplexy>