

1
2 Figure 1. Images of the sexually dimorphic diederik cuckoo, Chrysococcyx caprius, (a) female
3 (plumage duller, and the iris and eye-ring are brown), and (b) the more conspicuous male (breast
4 plumage bright white, with vibrant red iris and eye-ring), and (c) aerial view of a Southern red
5 bishop colony indicating distribution of experimental nests within the colony (photographs by D.
6 Cram and J. York; inset male Euplectes orix).